Bio

John McBride was born circa 1804 in Kentucky (sources: Felix's death certificate, 1850 census, all but one of Isaac's censuses). Felix's death certificate claims he was born in Boyle County, but the county wasn't founded until 1842 (external link). It is possible he was born in Mercer County, parts of which became Boyle county. In 1831 John married Olive C Vanarsdall in Mercer County. He was 27 and she was between 11 and 19 (although I would assume the older end of that range). By 1840 they were living in Mercer County, Kentucky, with two sons under five, one son between five and ten, one daughter under five, and one daughter between five and ten. Between 1849 and 1850 John's wife Olive had passed away (1850 census). John was living with all seven living children he had from his marriage. One of his children must have died or married very young because he had a daughter under five on the 1840 census who does not appear on the 1850 census. Between 1850 and 1852 John married Mary J Caldwell, who was 18 years his junior. By 1860 John had had three children with Mary and they were living together in Boone County, Missouri. John died in 1860. In his will, in which his brother in law and oldest son, William, were executors, he asks for real and personal property and land to be sold "for the best and highest price". He then wants one thousand dollars to go to his wife, along with a set of silver tea spoons and enough money to get her and her children to Marion County, Kentucky. He leaves his daughter Matilda one hundred and fifty dollars, his daughter Nancy one third of his estate, and his children William, George, Syrena Felix, John C, and Mary the rest of his estate. He leaves his sons Samuel and Isaac one dollar each. This leads me to believe they had some kind of falling out near the end of John's life.
